FOREWORD

The Biographical Directory of American Scholars, a companion volume to American Men of Science and Leaders in Education, has long been planned by The Science Press. The editorial work was started eleven years ago by J. McKeen Cattell, but the work was dropped as it was felt at the time that it could not be done without a large financial investment. The culmination of the plans for such a Directory has been made possible by the American Council of Learned Societies through the generosity of The Carnegie Corporation.

The editor is under great obligations to the American Council of Learned Societies and to Waldo G. Leland, its director, for making it possible for The Science Press to undertake the editing and publishing of this Directory. Much help and assistance has been given to us by Donald H. Dougherty, of the American Council of Learned Societies, from whom we received unstinted cooperation.

Much of the editorial detail and organization of the volume fell to John H. Houck who helped to compile the volume with precision and accuracy. Credit also is given to those who have done the detailed work, especially Miss Dorothy E. Bechtold, Mrs. Ruth H. Little, Mrs. Jane E. Bitzer and Miss Mary Jane Ulmer. Recognition should also be given The Science Press Printing Company for the excellent work in proofreading and printing.

Attention should be called to the method of abbreviation in the Directory. Material is always given in the same order in so far as possible. The order followed includes: full name, with title, the part of the name ordinarily omitted in correspondence being in parentheses; mail address; subject of investigation; birthplace; education; honorary degrees; positions, past and present, with dates; temporary or minor positions; honors such as directorships, trusteeships, prizes, medals, etc.; membership in learned societies; subjects of research. The last item requires explanation, as those engaged in the humanities frequently have a large number of published papers, and instead of making lists of these publications, endeavor is made to give the general subject in a short paragraph in whatever field the author may be working.

We present this new Directory with the realization that the first edition can not be without omissions, and it is hoped that its reception will warrant a new edition in five years.

INTRODUCTION

The need for a volume, such as the present one, devoted to biographical sketches of scholars in the humanities and social sciences, has long been recognized. The natural and mathematical sciences and education have been represented, respectively, in American Men of Science and Leaders in Education, but for information concerning workers in the humanities and social sciences, if available at all, it has been necessary to turn to general directories or to membership lists of societies or, in a few rare cases, to directories for single disciplines.

The normal usefulness of this directory will be augmented by its appearance during a period of national emergency, when the necessity for inventories of the nation's resources of man power is becoming increasingly apparent.

The principles which have guided the selection of names for inclusion in the directory have been largely practical rather than honorific; the term "scholar" was broadly interpreted, with the intention of giving mention to younger men and women who have given promise of future achievements, as well as to those whose attainments are already well demonstrated and widely known. As a result, a considerable percentage of the biographies will not be found in other directories.

It was understood, however, that the scholar is one who has actively engaged in the advancement of knowledge through research or, at some levels, through the constructive administration of research. Special problems arose, consequently, in dealing with those fields within which the individual may be occupied, as a major objective, with the application of knowledge rather than with its advancement. In the fine arts, for example, historical and speculative interests were made the criteria of selection rather than distinction in creative activity or in the teaching of the skills of one of the arts; in music, the musicologist, rather than the virtuoso or the teacher of the techniques of performance as such, was sought. Comparable difficulties were encountered in determining eligibility within the fields of library science, law, museum and archival administration, and elsewhere. Efforts were made, on the other hand, to give proper representation to those persons who are contributing to scholarly research through their affiliations with governmental, business, and other non-academic agencies.

The American Council of Learned Societies has assisted the preparation of the directory by acting as administrator of a generous grant from the Carnegie Corporation of New York and by naming consultants to assist the editors of The Science Press in determining certain questions of selection and policy. The consultants served individually and in several capacities, but only as they were requested to do so respecting specific problems. None of them, for example, was wholly responsible for the selection of names within any of the fields represented.

The preliminary, and most extensive, selection of names was made in the offices of The Science Press, where college catalogs, directories, and other sources were employed. Consultants for the Council in some instances were asked to review membership lists of learned societies in which previous choices were indicated; in other cases the consultants were requested to prepare supplementary lists, and in still others they were asked only to deal with brief lists of persons about whom additional information was desired.

The following persons assisted the Council's part in the preparation of the directory by giving advice and information:

W. F. ALBRIGHT (Archeology and Near Oriental Studies), The Johns Hopkins University.

CHARLES S. ASCHER (Political Science), Social Science Research Council.

MYRTILLA AVERY (Fine Arts), Wellesley College.

CAMPBELL BONNER (Classical Studies), University of Michigan.

JAMES H. S. BOSSARD (Sociology), University of Pennsylvania.

FREDERICK EDWARD BRASCH (History of Science), Library of Congress.

PHILIP C. BROOKS (History), The National Archives.

SOLON J. BUCK (History), The National Archives.

GEORGE R. COFFMAN (English Literature), University of North Carolina.

FRANCIS W. COKER (Political Science), Yale University.

L. V. COLEMAN (Museums), American Association of Museums.

R. D. CONNOR (History), University of North Carolina.

JOHN H. COVER (Economics), Standard Building, Cleveland, Ohio.

ROBERT T. CRANE (Social Sciences), Social Science Research Council.

F. S. DEIBLER (Economics), Northwestern University.

H. G. DOYLE (Romance Languages), The George Washington University.

PATTERSON H. FRENCH (Political Science), Social Science Research Council.

RICHARD L. FUNKHOUSER (Statistical Research), American Statistical Association.

JOSEPH P. HARRIS (Political Science), University of California.

CHARLES A. HART (Philosophy), Catholic University of America.

PRESTON E. JAMES (Geography), University of Michigan.

RENSSELAER W. LEE (Fine Arts), Smith College.

WILLIAM E. LINGELBACH (History), University of Pennsylvania.

RICHARD P. McKEON (Mediaeval Studies), University of Chicago.

FREDERICK C. MILLS (Economics), National Bureau of Economic Research and Columbia University.

HAROLD G. MOULTON (Economics), The Brookings Institution.

ARTHUR E. MURPHY (Philosophy), University of Illinois.

FREDERIC A. OGG (Political Science), University of Wisconsin.
 LOUIS PELZER (History), State University of Iowa.
 DEXTER PERKINS (History), University of Rochester.
 CHARLES SEEGER (Musicology), Pan American Union.
 EDWARD H. SEHRT (German), The George Washington University.
 FRANK M. SETZLER (Anthropology), U. S. National Museum.
 WALTER R. SHARP (Political Science), City College, New York City.
 HAROLD SPIVACKE (Musicology), Library of Congress.
 O. C. STINE (Economics), U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics.
 MARY HAMILTON SWINDLER (Archeology), Bryn Mawr College.
 CARL C. TAYLOR (Sociology), U. S. Department of Agriculture.
 HENRY B. VAN HOESSEN (Library Science), Brown University.
 EDWARD N. WATERS (Musicology), Library of Congress.
 H. A. WICHELNS (Speech), Cornell University.
 MALCOLM M. WILLEY (Sociology), University of Minnesota.
 CHARLES C. WILLIAMSON (Library Science), Columbia University.
 DONALD YOUNG (Social Sciences), Social Science Research Council.
 KIMBALL YOUNG (Sociology), Queens College.

Members of the staff of the American Council of Learned Societies, especially Messrs. Mortimer Graves, Donald Goodchild, and Donald H. Daugherty, served in various capacities, and Mr. Daugherty acted in a way as the general administrator of assistance to the editors of The Science Press.

Similarly the staff of the Social Science Research Council, especially Mr. Robert T. Crane and Mr. Donald Young, furnished much help and advice.

With all this collaboration, however, the enterprise has from the beginning been the responsibility of The Science Press, who organized it and carried it through to completion. Neither the American Council of Learned Societies nor the Social Science Research Council has assumed responsibility for the directory beyond that of procuring advice.

The undersigned cannot refrain from commenting on the energy and resourcefulness with which The Science Press, and especially its Editor, Mr. Jaques Cattell, have carried on the work of compiling and editing the directory. Their experience with American Men of Science and Leaders in Education has qualified them for the task that they have undertaken for the social sciences and the humanities. It is the hope of the Councils and of the consultants that the BIOGRAPHICAL DIRECTORY OF AMERICAN SCHOLARS may, like its prototypes, become a self-supporting and permanent institution.
